Thanks for the suggestions.

You are exactly correct. I didn't really know what format the videos would take when I started. I just did it one day because I wanted to get more people programming the IIgs, and I didn't really plan very well. I honestly thought that no one would watch them.

I am taking a break until I get back from my honeymoon (I'm getting married in 13 days!!!) When I get back I have a list of improvements to make. But the main three changes will be 1) I'll start posting all code used in each video online (probably via GitHub) and 2) I will repeatedly state something like, "You can ask questions or join the conversation on twitter or by emailing us.. [give twitter/email addresses] ... and of course join us on apple2.gs forums"... and 3) I'll be trying to put the videos in their own place on here so we can have the full conversation with the ability to post media/code more easily.

I need to make it easier for people to give feedback. I do check the video comments, facebook messages, forum posts, etc... but I never explicitly told people how they could ask questions. Doh!

I am trying to demonstrate small chunks, but it is difficult because some pieces are inter-related and I'm impatient. I just want to get right into making games/demos. :)
