I think this is a great idea, and I will watch them!

I like the style of scoopex's Amiga programming videos, such as [see next post for link -- you have to post once before being allowed to post a link]

By watching those I learned even basic tools like a good editor to find. If you're using a modern IDE, you'll probably have more editing to do to switch views from the development tool to the program running on the IIGS.

It is good to include some "what not to do" topics too. For example, if there is something that is an easy way to do something when learning, but will be regretted later, that might be good to point out.

Hope this helps, and I'm sorry I can't currently commit any time to helping create the content.
